"A ONE HORSE TOWN"

Story and Direction by
TOM BUCKINGHAM

Two actors are thrown off a train, into a small, one horse town. There they decide to clean up the town with their talents -and their first acquaintance happens to be Harry, the dumb-bell of the town.

They use Harry to paste up bill posters, and Harry has all he can do to keep the fences from falling down. In the end every fence he comes across falls.

The night of the big show arrives, and one of the actors impersonates a prima donna. While in the midst of his song Harry starts fixing the boiler behind the stage.

Everytime they want to do something Harry spoils the show, but he reinstates himself in the eyes of his sweetheart's father when he frustrates a plot to run off with the hotel's money.
